Thank you Allen!

Allen Silverstone, PhD has served on our board of trustees for close to 40 years, joining in 1974 following his own student activism days, working with SNCC and for peace in Vietnam. He is a single payer healthcare advocate and a professor and researcher of Microbiology and Immunology at Upstate Medical Center, SUNY, and has been a great resource especially in interviewing and evaluating applicants focused on public health issues. As Allen leaves the board, we want to express our deep gratitude for his years of commitment to student activism, movements for peace and justice and to the Davis-Putter Scholarship Fund.

Online Giving Update

For the past several years, online gifts to Davis-Putter were made through a non-profit organization called Network for Good where the funds were processed and “granted” the donations to us. As of May of this year we are using a new online donation process which allows you, our donors to make donations that are directly deposited to us. The tax receipt you receive is from the Davis-Putter Scholarship Fund.

The online form on our website looks a bit different, but you are still able to make a donation in honor or memory of a loved one and you can still set up a monthly, quarterly or annual recurring donation. Recurring gifts are a convenient way to provide sustaining support for our grantees. We feel good about these changes and we hope you will too.

Welcome Clairessa, Gina and Diana

Welcome Clairessa, Gina and Diana Pei Wu, is an Assistant Professor of Women’s and Gender and Sexuality Studies and Chicano/Latino Studies at Cal State, Long Beach, co-founded INCITE: Women of Color Against Violence and is an internationally published poet who trusts the creative spirit. Her scholarly and activist work explores the interrelatedness of the myriad manifestations of violence and the possibilities for the transformation. She is committed to mentoring radical students on campus and in her own organizing and is excited to support student activism as a DPSF trustee.

Each year the Fund selects a grantee who honors the legacy of commitment to peace and justice modeled by Jessie Lloyd O’Connor, a labor journalist, organizer and die-hard reformer who was imprisioned for her activism for over two decades. O’Connor was the first recipient of the Marilyn Buck Award. Learning of the award, a generous benefactor made a donation in her memory. The award has become a way to honor and support student activists, who might otherwise be left out of the mainstream of the peace and social justice movement.

Myra Solliday

Myra entered the prison system in 1990 at the age of 32, hoping for rehabilitation and finding abuse, rape and harassment by prison guards. Her experiences have motivated her to work with community organizations for prison reform and protection from these abuses. She works to educate prisoners on their rights, and plans to work with attorneys on post-conviction issues and continue challenging internal prison abuse and neglect, while completing a Legal/Paralegal certification.

Elisa Oceguera

Elisa has learned through Acción Zapatista the significant relationship between research, action and dignity. She is in the final research phase of her Cultural Studies Ph.D. program at UC Davis. In the fall of 2013 she listed in the fall as a member of the Zapatista network and is currently completing her analysis and dissertation. Elisa is currently working on a project examining the ways in which the liberation movements of the 1960’s and 70’s have impacted the current liberation struggles of the Zapatistas in Chiapas. Elisa’s work is in the field research phase of her Cultural Studies Ph.D. program at UC Davis.

For the past several years, online gifts to Davis-Putter were made through a non-profit organization called Network for Good who processed the gifts and “granted” the donations to us. As of May of this year we are using a new online donation process which allows you, our donors to make donations that are directly deposited to us. The tax receipt you receive is from the Davis-Putter Scholarship Fund.

The online form on our website looks a bit different, but you are still able to make a donation in honor or memory of a loved one and you can still set up a monthly, quarterly or annual recurring donation. Recurring gifts are a convenient way to provide sustaining support for our grantees. We feel good about these changes and we hope you will too.

Welcome Clairessa, Gina and Diana

Welcome Clairessa, Gina and Diana Pei Wu, is an Assistant Professor of Women’s and Gender and Sexuality Studies and Chicano/Latino Studies at Cal State, Long Beach, co-founded INCITE: Women of Color Against Violence and is an internationally published poet who trusts the creative spirit. Her scholarly and activist work explores the interrelatedness of the myriad manifestations of violence and the possibilities for the transformation. She is committed to mentoring radical students on campus and in her own organizing and is excited to support student activism as a DPSF trustee.

Each year the Fund selects a grantee who honors the legacy of commitment to peace and justice modeled by Jessie Lloyd O’Connor, a labor journalist, organizer and die-hard reformer who was imprisioned for her activism for over two decades. O’Connor was the first recipient of the Marilyn Buck Award. Learning of the award, a generous benefactor made a donation in her memory. The award has become a way to honor and support student activists, who might otherwise be left out of the mainstream of the peace and social justice movement.

Myra Solliday

Myra entered the prison system in 1990 at the age of 32, hoping for rehabilitation and finding abuse, rape and harassment by prison guards. Her experiences have motivated her to work with community organizations for prison reform and protection from these abuses. She works to educate prisoners on their rights, and plans to work with attorneys on post-conviction issues and continue challenging internal prison abuse and neglect, while completing a Legal/Paralegal certification.

Elisa Oceguera

Elisa has learned through Acción Zapatista the significant relationship between research, action and dignity. She is in the final research phase of her Cultural Studies Ph.D. program at UC Davis. In the fall of 2013 she listed in the fall as a member of the Zapatista network and is currently completing her analysis and dissertation. Elisa is currently working on a project examining the ways in which the liberation movements of the 1960’s and 70’s have impacted the current liberation struggles of the Zapatistas in Chiapas. Elisa’s work is in the field research phase of her Cultural Studies Ph.D. program at UC Davis.
The Marilyn Buck Award – Myra Solliday

As a teenager in Texas, Marilyn Buck fought for civil rights and in 1973 was accused and convicted of buying two boxes of hand gun ammunition for the BLA, receiving a ten-year sentence. While on furlough she failed to return and received sentences totaling 80 years following her capture and conviction. With grants from the Fund in 2003 and 2004, she finished a degree from New College of San Francisco. After a rare cancer was discovered, she received early release in July, 2010 and died on August 3, 2010. Marilyn not only supported the Fund with regular donations and supportive notes from her jail cell, but with a generous bequest following her death. To honor her memory and legacy, The Marilyn Buck Award will be given to an incarcerated or formerly incarcerated activist working for justice. Myra Solliday is the first recipient of the Marilyn Buck Award. Learning of the award, she said, “This is such an honor - I actually knew Marilyn. We were at Shawnee (Unit of Marianna Prison) at the same time and she was an inspiration to all of us.” Myra entered the prison system in 1990 at the age of 32, hoping for rehabilitation and finding abuse, rape and harassment by prison guards. Her experiences have motivated her to work with community organizations for prison reform and protections from these abuses. She works to educate prisoners on their rights, and plans to work with attorneys on post conviction issues and continue challenging internal prison abuse and neglect, while completing a Legal/Paralegal certification.

2013/14 Jessie Lloyd O’Connor Scholar – Elisa Oceguera

Each year the Fund selects a granting who honors the legacy of commitment to peace and justice modeled by Jessie Lloyd O’Connor, a labor journalist, organizer and an early and beloved member of our Board, who with her husband Harvey, opened heart and home to activists seeking respite. Our Jessie Lloyd O’Connor Scholar this year is Elisa Oceguera. Elisa has learned through Acción Zapatista the significant relationship between research, action and dignity. She is in the field research phase of her Cultural Studies Ph.D. program at UC Davis. Elisa holds a PhD in Society and Environment from the University of California, Berkeley. A 2003 grantee, Diana says, “I strongly believe in the need to support student activists in simultaneously pursuing academic work and political activism.”

Welcome Clarissa, Gina and Diana

We are honored to welcome three new trustees to our board. Clarissa Rojas is an Assistant Professor of Women’s, Gender and Sexuality Studies and Chicano/Latino Studies at Cal State, Long Beach, co-founded INCITE: Women of Color Against Violence and is an internationally published poet who trusts the creative spirit. Her scholarly and activist work explores the interconnectedness of the myriad manifestations of violence and the possibilities for the transformation. She is committed to mentoring radical students on campus, and in her own organizing and is excited to support student activism as a DPSF trustee. Gina Velasco is an Assistant Professor of Women’s and Gender Studies at Keene State College in New Hampshire and with the support of a Davis-Putter grant in 2007 completed her Ph.D. in the History of Consciousness program at UC, Santa Cruz. Her research and teaching explore how gender and queer sexuality inform notions of nation, diaspora, and transnational belonging in a contemporary context of globalization. She says, “I strongly believe in the need to support student activists in simultaneously pursuing academic work and political activism.” Diana Pei Wu is the Organizing Director with the Asian Pacific American Network of Oregon (APANO), and a consultant and volunteer on creative resistance and strategic communications and holds a PhD in Society and Environment from the University of California, Berkeley. A 2003 grantee, Diana says, “The Davis-Putter Scholarship made a huge difference financially, and simultaneously gave me a psychological and emotional boost. I’d like to continue to give back.”
Although organizing in varied movements, our grantees work to connect struggles, believing that multi-issue organizing is the way to make real and lasting change. They keep central the work of challenging institutionalized systems of violence and oppression and see their own liberation tied to peace and justice for all.

Kellee Coleman co-founded Mamas of Color Rising, a collective of poor and working mothers challenging racism and anti-immigrant injustice. She is on the board of INCITE! and is beginning a BA in Global Studies at St. Edward’s University in Austin, TX. Pascal Emmer fosters movements for prison abolition andtrans justice while organizing with the Academic Workers for a Democratic Union and conducting interviews for his doctoral work in Sociology at UC Santa Cruz on the role of meta-generational organizing and affinity in radical LGBTQ movement. Kai Green is a filmmaker, poet, teacher and scholar, dedicated to prison abolition through art and scholarship, creating pedagogy in community spaces around Black Queer LA histories, the basis for his dissertation toward a PhD in American Studies and Ethnicity at University of Southern California.

Karen Hanna organizes Filipino youth in campaigns supporting exploited restaurant and domestic workers, peace in the Middle East and sponsoredknow your rights workshops, while researching the history of Filipino Progressive/Anti-Imperialist Movement in the US toward an MA/PhD in Feminist Studies at UC, Santa Barbara. Mayra Hildago Salazar co-ordinated the 2010 Trial of the Nine. An immigrant justice leader, she co-founded the Lakeland Immigration Legal Clinic and the Alabama Coalition for Justice fighting anti-immigrant legislation while seeking a BA in Public Policy at Sarah Lawrence College with a growing immigrant detention complex for institutional divestment from oppressive energy consumption, implements renewable energy projects on campus and works with the Southern Energy Network promoting environmental and human rights, while seeking a BS/BA in Environmental Policy and Chemistry at the University of South Florida.

Adam Kuranišhi creates opportunities for strategic direct actions on immigration, incarceration, public health, food deserts and gentrification in the Pilsen neighborhood of Chicago, while coordinating campaigns to halt the detention and deportation of immigrants, and is now seeking a BA in Social Thought and Teaching Columbia Teachers College. Annie Le leads campus campaigns related to workers’ rights, food systems, public health, dirty energy industries and the “medical industrial complex,” focusing on the distribution and nature of nutritious foods, and seeking a B.A/MA in Environmental Science while pursuing an MPH at the UCLA Fielding School of Public Health. Ayeesha Mahmooda organizes with DRM, Desta Rising Up and Moving, a grassroots group building power for economic, worker, immigrant and education rights in low income South Asian immigrant communities, while pursuing a Masters in Public Administration at Baruch College.

Rickee Mananzala, a national leader in LGBTQ, racial and economic justice movements, trains grassroots leaders in multi-issue organizing strategies and convened the first ever LGBTQ and HIV/imprisonment meeting to shape national policy while completing a BA/MPA in Political Science and Public Policy at Columbia University. Luùl Martinez co-founded the Immigrant Youth Justice League and as one of the DREAM 9, was detained and then put in solitary for educating detainees about their rights, and returns to the University of Illinois, Chicago continuing work on a BA in Women and Gender Studies. Ileana Méndez-Periñate co-created Regeneración, providing care and movement building programs for children of working parents, in particular those organizing with Domestic Workers United and works as co-coordinator of Streetwide and Safe, training LGBTQ youth to organize and build community while pursuing an MSW degree at Hunter College.

Bruce Micheals is committed to making education accessible and achievable for all prisoners, co-founded a College Education Committee in prison, publishing a College in Prison guide and letter-writing to decision-makers, while pursuing a BA in Sociology and Psychology at Adams State College. Angel Mills is a member of the Ogala Lakota Nation and a fellow with the Native Youth Leadership Alliance, working in coalition with Native leaders to end poverty and support efforts of self-determination through mental health, youth activism and filmmaking while seeking an APA in New Media Arts at the Institute of American Indian Arts. Miguel Angel Montalva Barba develops coalition between immigrant and LGBTQ communities and creates safe spaces for “undocuqueers,” through dialogue and story-telling rooted in critical pedagogy and race theory, while pursuing a PhD in Sociology at Northeastern University, where he will research how identity formation among LGBTQ undocumented youth is influenced by ethnic media.

Steven Parkhurst, as a juvenile lifer, is a spokesperson with the Campaign for Youth Justice, creates and distributes “Cont*Mic,” a set of graphic pamphlets focusing on prisoner justice, racism and anti-violence, and plans to start a business that employs formerly incarcerated people following his parole and completion of an MBA. He co-founded Communities Against the Prison Industrial Complex (CAPIC) focusing on breaking the school to prison pipeline, de-militarizing schools and bridging struggles of mass incarceration and immigration, while completing a BA in Philosophy at California State Fullerton. Tamanna Rahman coordinated an LGBTQ Immigrant project with the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, organized with UNITE HERE! and the LGBTQ Immigrant project with the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, organized with UNITE HERE! and the “Secure Communities” deportation program, and is committed to a collective healthcare model that is accessible and relevant in immigrant communities, while completing an MSN at Yale University.

Berenice Rodríguez co-founded Student Dreamers and Allies while in high school, became involved with the Georgia Undocumented Youth Alliance following passage of an anti-immigrant bill, worked with South Georgia Farm Workers Alliance and distributed “Con*Mic,” a set of graphic pamphlets focusing on prisoner justice, racism and anti-violence, and plans to start a business that employs formerly incarcerated people following his parole and completion of an MBA. He co-founded Communities Against the Prison Industrial Complex (CAPIC) focusing on breaking the school to prison pipeline, de-militarizing schools and bridging struggles of mass incarceration and immigration, while completing a BA in Philosophy at California State Fullerton. Tamanna Rahman coordinated an LGBTQ Immigrant project with the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, organized with UNITE HERE! and the “Secure Communities” deportation program, and is committed to a collective healthcare model that is accessible and relevant in immigrant communities, while completing an MSN at Yale University.

Sarahi Uribe organized domestic workers and day laborers with the National Day Laborers Organizing Network (NDLON), first as a grassroots organizer and then as the national campaign coordinator, challenging the “Secure Communities” deportation program, and now attends NYU School of Law. Carolina Valdez co-founded the People’s Education Movement (PEM), a multi-ethnic, decolonial organization of educators addressing all forms of oppression and connecting pedagogy, personal healing and community action in Black/Brown communities, while a second year doctoral student in Education and Urban Schooling at UCLA. Angelica Velasquillo worked to stop her brother’s deportation in 2011 and has since organized with the North Carolina DREAM Team and others halting detention center expansion and working with “unaccompanied minors,” while seeking an MA in Social Service Administration at the University of Chicago.

Reyna Wences, a co-founder of the Immigrant Youth Justice League, has organized around the country, most recently leading a blockade action during a presidential visit in Chicago, and at the Not One More Convergence where she led protests to End the Streamline deportation program while seeking a degree at the University of Illinois, Chicago in Women and Gender Studies. Mateo Williamson works with No More Deaths and Kino Border Initiative documenting deportation stories especially of sexual and gender minorities seeking asylum and organizes to end the practice of reparative therapy, while studying Spanish at the University of Arizona.

Read more about our grantees on the website at www.davisputter.org.

Grant applications are available on our website in January and must be postmarked by April 1.